Update on Tatasham Drill Program in Ecuador

Drilling commenced at the Company’s Tatasham porphyry target in southeastern Ecuador in late November and is expected to continue throughout January 2023. Tatasham is the Company’s largest geophysical feature identified in the airborne magnetic survey that was conducted over the Project area in 2017.

Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer, Dr. Keith Barron commented, “Our team in Ecuador is managing the steep terrain at Tatasham very well, and the drill pad on the side of a slope is an extraordinary feat of engineering. We expect to drill 3 to 4 holes at Tatasham to test the target areas that have shown indications of a porphyry system at surface during the Anaconda method mapping program. The results of the mapping program were discussed in our press release dated November 16, 2022.”
